Dr. Juan A. Embil Award for Excellence in Infectious Diseases Research
Trainees – Residents/Fellows in Infectious Diseases

The accomplishments achieved and contributions made by infectious diseases specialists have wide reaching impacts on the health of Canadians. The Board of Directors of the Canadian Foundation for Infectious Diseases invites you to help us recognize the contributions to research made by our trainees by applying for or nominating individuals for the 2017 Dr. Juan A. Embil Award for Excellence in Infectious Diseases Research. This award is given to an Infectious Diseases trainee in recognition of research excellence in infectious diseases as demonstrated through a published manuscript.

Nominees Must:

- Be enrolled in a 2-year Infectious Diseases Training Program at a Canadian University or within 1 year of completing their Infectious Diseases training;
 - Have completed their research project during their 2 year Infectious Diseases Training Program; and
 - Have a manuscript published, or submitted for publication, that stems from their research.

Nominations with supporting documentation should be sent by e-mail as a single PDF document to Coleman.Rotstein@uhn.ca and must be received no later than January 20, 2017.

Submissions will be reviewed by the CFID Awards Committee and the winner will be announced February 24, 2017. The award will be conferred at the AMMI Canada - CACMID Annual Conference in Toronto, Ontario.

If you have questions, please contact Dr. Coleman Rotstein, Chair, CFID Awards Committee, at Coleman.Rotstein@uhn.ca.

Nominations must include:

- The candidate's curriculum vitae (maximum 3 pages);
 - A copy of the Manuscript (published or submitted for publication); and
 - 1 letter from the project supervisor recommending the candidate for this award and explicitly stating the trainee's involvement in the project and describing how the manuscript advances the field of research.
